University Of Washington

On a ten-acre tract of hilly wilderness that is now the heart of downtown Seattle, the Territorial University of Washington opened November 4, 1861, with an enrollment of 31 students.

In its earliest years, the University of Washington was neither a university nor a college. It was a backwoods school founded by pioneers who were determined to provide education for their children even in the wilderness. Later, courses were divided into primary, academic, and collegiate departments. For 15 years after its founding, no direct legislative appropriations were made for the University. Four times during those years the infant school was closed because of lack of funds, lack of students, or both.

By the time the state of Washington was admitted to the Union in 1889, the University had become firmly established as a higher educational institution in the pioneer community.

In 1891, the new University site was selected. It is the school's present 600-acre location on the shores of Lake Washington and Lake Union, about six miles north of the city center. The cornerstone for the first building, Denny Hall, was laid in 1894, and first classes were held there in 1895 with an enrollment of 425 students.

The Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition, held on the campus in 1909, opened a new period in University history. The exposition provided many new buildings and also focused national attention on the Pacific Northwest and the University. Architecture Hall is an exposition building still in use today.

The University's greatest period of growth came in the years immediately following World War II, when the size of its student body increased threefold. Since 1945, floor space has been doubled in an extensive building program that included the establishment of four-year medical and dental schools, a 300-bed University Teaching and Research Hospital, and two men's dormitories.

Today the University ranks as one of America's major educational institutions by measurement of staff, facilities, enrollment, and provisions for graduate training. The oldest state university on the Pacific Coast, it is among the fifteen largest state universities in the nation, with an enrollment of nearly 27,000 and a full-time faculty of more than 1,800. An indication of its stature is its membership in the Association of American Universities, an honor shared by only three other universities in the West.

Major areas of instruction include the liberal arts and basic sciences, architecture, business administration, dentistry, education, engineering, fisheries, forestry, graduate school, law, medicine, nursing, pharmacy, social work and extension and correspondence studies.

The University of Washington has the only university college of fisheries devoted both to fisheries biology and technology and is the only university in the United States to offer an undergraduate degree in oceanography.

The University has operated its own radio station, KUOW-FM, since 1952. The station serves as a laboratory for radio students and the entire staff is composed of students. Radio education has been expanded to include television training as well. The University is the license holder of KCTS (TV), Channel 9, the Seattle educational TV-station sponsored cooperatively by the University of Washington, Seattle University, Seattle Pacific College, the Seattle Public Schools, the Seattle Public Library, and the King County Public Schools.

Library facilities include a main library and departmental branch libraries with nearly a million volumes. Its Pacific Northwest collection is one of the most important and complete sources of Pacific Northwest Americana in existence. The collection consists of books, pamphlets, maps, photographs, original manuscripts, and newspapers relating to Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Western Montana, Alaska, and British Columbia. Although basically a collection of historical materials, many studies concerned with the economic and social development of the Pacific Northwest are also included.

The government of the University is vested in the Board of Regents, consisting of seven members appointed by the Governor of the State with the approval of the State Senate for terms of six years each. The President of the University has immediate charge of the administration of the institution, under rules prescribed by the Regents. A University Senate, elected by and responsible to the faculty, is the legislative and policy-forming organization of the faculty.

The student government organization, the Associated Students of the University of Washington, has charge of all student activities. These include intercollegiate athletics, a cooperative bookstore, the daily newspaper, monthly magazine, yearbook, and the operation of the $3,000,000 Student Union Building.

The school colors are purple and gold. University athletic teams are known as the Huskies.

The College of Veterinary Medicine

Veterinary medicine has existed since the domestication of animals.

The first authentic record of its practice dates back to 2200 B.C. when Hammurabi, king of Babylon, enacted the "Code of Hammurabi" in which the practitioners were referred to as animal doctors.

Dean Walter R. Krill

The first veterinarians were primarily concerned with the welfare of animals and, as a result, the veterinary art was in the hands of shepherds, farriers and race track touts.

Today, veterinarians are also deeply concerned with the welfare of humans as it is affected by animals.

The first formal education in veterinary medicine began in France in about 1740 and veterinary medical education began in the United States in 1852.

The Ohio State University College of Veterinary Medicine was established in 1885 and since that date 3,136 men and women have been granted the degree Doctor of Veterinary Medicine. The college also has awarded 161 master of science degrees and 45 Ph.D. degrees.

Recognized nationally and internationally for its instructional and research program, the Ohio State college ranks first in undergraduate enrollment nationally and third in graduate enrollment.

It has the largest alumni body of any such school in the country as one out of every 10 veterinarians in the U.S. is an Ohio State graduate.

First dean of the College of Veterinary Medicine was Hinrich Janssen Detmers, a native of Germany who studied at both the Royal Veterinary College in Hanover and the Royal Veterinary College in Berlin. He served from 1885 to 1895.

Dean of the college since 1946 has been Dr. Walter R. Krill, who holds both the bachelor of science in agriculture and doctor of veterinary medicine degrees from Ohio State.

Early instruction in the college was conducted in the first university building, University Hall. Today, work goes on in several modern structures, including Sisson Hall, completed in 1956 at a cost of $1.1-million; Goss Laboratory of Veterinary Pathology, completed in 1962 at a cost of $1.8-million; and a temporary Veterinary Clinic Building, completed in 1965 at a cost of $618,000.

Aside from its day-to-day efforts to train veterinarians for the numerous positions open to them, the college also conducts an extensive research program, with studies ranging from those involving germ-free animals to others concerned with developing pre-race tests for detecting drugged race horses.

W. H. Davis (left), Alcoa's General Manager—Industrial Relations, says: "We've found that Army ROTC graduates with active duty experience as officers possess better than average initiative, foresight, and responsibility. These are qualities we rate very highly, and we gladly pay a premium to get them."

Why did Alcoa hire Rod Wilson?

Because Alcoa needs men to fill key positions—men capable of moving to the top; men who seek and measure up to responsibility. Rod Wilson is that kind of man. An Army ROTC Distinguished Military Graduate at Colorado State University, Rod won an officer's commission in the Regular Army along with his degree. Forty-four months of active duty, including 16 months overseas as an artillery commander, earned Rod Wilson 24-carat credentials as a leader, a man schooled in the demanding disciplines of command, the kind of man Alcoa looks for.

If you're this kind of man, prove it to yourself, and to the companies like Alcoa who are looking for you. How? Get in Army ROTC. Stay with Army ROTC, all the way to success.

"OFFICIAL WATCH FOR THIS GAME — LONGINES — THE WORLD'S MOST HONORED WATCH"

The Rocket Action Cars are out front again!

After you've walked off with all the honors, what do you do for an encore?

Meet Olds Toronado—'67 edition.

Awards for this. Awards for that. Awards for just about everything. But rest on its laurels? Not Toronado. Swinging new look outside. Posh new detailing inside. Doors with torsion-bar spring assists that open easier than ever to the flat-floored, room-for-six interior. Even that fabulous front-wheel-drive ride is smoother and quieter for '67. And front disc brakes and radial ply tires are available. Trend-setting Toronado: Proved and applauded by tens of thousands of satisfied owners. Greater than ever the second time around!

Olds thinks of your safety, too, with the GM-developed energy-absorbing steering column that can compress on severe impact up to 8 1/2 inches; with four-way hazard warning flasher; outside rearview mirror; dual master cylinder brake system, plus many other safety features—all standard for '67.

Engineered for excitement . . . Toronado-style!

The Ohio State University Marching Band presents

Situation and Music

Trumpet fanfares and a triumphal march signal the trumpet as king of the instruments.

The long, post horn signalling different events was prominent in the development of the instrument. As you can see and hear, the trumpet is a very directional instrument.

The trumpet was used in early English music. Later on, it was developed into a bugle and, later, with the development of valves, became the instrument familiar to people everywhere.

The character of the change in music is illustrated in Purcell's Trumpet Voluntary, Bugle Call Rag, and Trumpet Blues.

Towers and carillons go hand in hand. Cornets, part of the trumpet family, blend for a beautiful carillon effect.

Concerts often include the use of solo cornets, duets and trios. Current use of trumpets in music includes a style known as the Tijuana Brass.

The Band's trumpets are used to great effect in the Sound of the Campus Chimes and Carmen Ohio.
